CORDIAL WORDS FROM SIR MOR-TIMER DURAND.

Our Skyline Hit Him Hard—Reports Wounds of War Healing in Spain-England in Two Camps Over the Tariff-But One on the Need of Army Reorganization.

The Right Hon. Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, G. C. M. G., K. C. S. I., K. C. I. E., British Ambassador to the United States, arrived here yesterday on the Etruria. He was met at the pier by Sir Percy Sanderon, British Consul-General at New York: Percy Wyndham, Third Secretary of the British Legation, and Clarence Bowen of 5 East Sixty-fifth street, a brother of Herbert Bowen, United States Minister to Venezuela. Sir Mortimer will be Mr. Bowen's guest while in New York. He may go to Washington this afternoon, or he may stay over until to-morrow.

The new Ambassador is 53 years old, nearly six feet tall, with a fine physique, ruddy complexion and gray hair and mus-While he has great dignity of manper, he has a smile that would melt ice on a cold day. He needs to wear no signs to tell that he is a trained diplomat. He knows exactly what he wants to say, and no amount of questioning will induce him to discuss matters that he doesn't care to talk about. But his refusals to talk are so expressed that one goes away from an interview with him almost ready to declare that he hasn't refused to talk about any-

In talking with the reporters Sir Mortimer said: "It is difficult for me to tell you how pleased I am to come to the United States, but I could wish that I were not coming to take the place of him whose untimely death left our legation in Washington without a head. Sir Michael Henry Herbert was not only one of the most lovable of men, but he was also one of the ablest diplomats in our service. It was your loss as well as ours when he died. If, in a that I can hope for. "When I say that I am delighted to come to this country I mean it in the most literal sense. You have heard of places that you would give a great deal to see and become acquainted with. Well, that is the way it is with me regarding the United States. For years I have desired to visit this country, but my work has been for so long so far from the wonderful land of which I had read and dreamed that I was beginning to think that I should never get here. I would rather have the mission to which I have been accredited than any in the world, and when it was offered to me you may believe that I lost no time in accepting it. I came to the conclusion long ago that one must really see and know this country to know the true meaning of the word progress.

Before I entered New York harbor I thought I had read carefully enough a sufficient number of descriptions of it to know it pretty well. But I assure you that knew it pretty well. But I assure you that I was not at all prepared for the sights I saw coming up the bay. To one who has lived long in the East, as I have, the sky line of your harbor shores is a revelation. I have heard of 'skyscrapers.' This afternoon I have seen some. I don't quite know what I should do if our embassy were in the top of one of those buildings. I am afraid I should be half inclined to ask my Government to buy me a bungalow.

afraid I should be half inclined to ask my Government to buy me a bungalow.

You see I have been stationed in Madrid for the past three years and before that almost all my public life was spent in the Far Fast. I arrived in London only on Nov. 7, and I cannot talk very intelligently or very interestingly on the public questions that just now occupy the attention of my countrymen at home. So nearly as I could judge, however, the all-absorbing topics in England at present are the tariff and the reorganization of the army.

"Englishmen are taking sides pretty rapidly on the question precipitated by Mr. Chamberlain. For example, two Englishmen on the Etruria were on opposite sides of the tariff question and they got into the liveliest kind of discussions on the way over. One thought Mr. Chamberlain's into the liveliest kind of discussions on the way over. One thought Mr. Chamberlain's scheme would be the salvation of the Empire and the other thought it would be its damnation. That was about the way it was in England, so far as I could judge in the short time I was there.

"I think that all Englishmen are pretty weil agreed, since the publication of the Army Commission's report, that the army needs reorganization. It seems to be pretty clearly demonstrated that our military is not elastic enough and that, in time pretty clearly demonstrated that our mili-tary is not elastic enough and that, in time of emergency, we should have a better scheme for expanding our forces to a war-hasis than we had during the Boer war. As for the tariff, I don't think anybody can foretell what the outcome will be until after the next general election. That will not be until some time next year, at ill not be until some time next year, at the earliest.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that the feeling in Spain toward the United States is now quite cordial. During the Spanish-American War the feeling among Spaniards against what they called the 'Yankees' was naturally pretty bitter. The war wounds are healing rapidly, however, and Don and Yankee may now dwell in comparative harmony together.

"I suppose you will expect me to say something about the new Republic of Panama and the canal. As a matter of fact, I don't feel that I am well enough informed on that situation to discuss it. I may say, how-ever, that the world will hail the day when ever, that the world will hall the day when a canal across the Isthmus is completed and the world asks nothing more than that the canal shall ever be the ward of the great republic of the West. The commerce of the world will be the salient by the building world will be the gainer by the building of the canal.

"I expect to leave for Washington tomorrow, for I feel that I ought to present my credentials as early as possible. I am anxious to take up my work and I am more anxious to get acquainted. My wife and daughter will be here, I hope, in time to of the canal.

Lady Durand was Miss Ella-Rebe, daughter of Teignmouth Sandys, B. C. S., and was married Sir Mortimer in 1875. They have a son and a daughter, the latter, Lady Amy Josephine, being a great beauty. Sir Mortimer was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn in 1872. A year later he entered the Bengal civil service. He was political secretary to Lord Roberts during the Kabul campaign of 1879; was foreign secretary to the Governor-General of India from 1884 to 1894; conducted a mission to Afghanistan in 1893 and was British Minister to Persia from 1894 to 1900, when he was sent Sir Mortimer has found time to make a few books. He edited the "History of the First Afghan War," written by his father, Sir Henry Durand, and published in 1879; he wrote the "Life of Sir Henry Durand," published in 1883, and "Helen Treveryan," published in 1881.

INTERNAL REVENUE TAXES. Commissioner Estimates That Collections

This Year Will Reach $230,000,600. WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 .- The Commissioner of Internal Revenue says that the receipts for the current fiscal year from all sources of internal taxation will not be less than $230,000,000. This estimate, he says in his annual report to the Secretary of the Treasury, is predicated on the returns of the first three months of the fiscal period and on existing trade conditions.

Last year's receipts were $230,740,925. For the current fiscal year, yesterday's Treasury statement gives the internal revenue collections actually covered into the Treasury since July 1 to date as $100,428,-424. The figures for the same date last year were $96,422,633. Last year's entire receipts were about $41,000,000 less than those of the fiscal year 1902, owing to the repeal of war taxes

The Commissioner says his estimate would need to be revised if Congress should reduce the tax on proof spirits from $1.10 to 90 cents or even 70 cents a gallon, as many of the distillers demand. It is believed, of the distillers demand. It is believed, however, that Congress will not do this, in view of the decreasing customs receipts and the present small deficit in the Treasury. Even if a reduction in the rate on proof spirits should be ordered, it would probably not become effective before the end of the present fiscal year.

The Internal Revenue Bureau was concerned largely during the last year with the refunds on account of war revenue stamps, and with the administration of the new oleomargarine law. The work of the bureau is constantly increasing One cause of this condition appears in the fact that in 1902 the total production of spirits was 182,843,802 gallons and in 1903 148,206,875 gallons In round numbers, in 1902 104,000,000 gallons of tax paid spirits were withdrawn and in 1903 114,000,000 gallons. There has been a large increase in the production of tobacco and beer.

Treaty-Dr. Herran, Colombia's Charge d'Affaires, Confers With Gen. Reyes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.-The main event in the Panama situation to-day was the arrival here of the Colombian commission, headed by Gen. Rafael Reyes, the Vice-President of the republic, which, having failed to make any headway with the Panama Junta toward a compromise with Colombia, came on to Washington for some purpose not disclosed. The other members of the commission are Jorge Holguin. José D. Angula, Gen. Pedro Aspina and Lucas Cabellero. Gen. Reyes and Messrs. Holguin and Angula registered at the Arlington, where headquarters were established.

Almost immediately after the arrival of the commissioners at the Arlington, they received a visit from Walker Martinez, the Chilean Minister, who had a cordial conversation with them. The call of the Minister excited some comment, not only on account of the marked haste shown by him in making connections with the commission, but in view of a report to the State Department from Henry L. Wilson, the United States Minister to Chile, that he had been informally notified that the Chilean Government approved the course of the United States on the Isthmus. United States on the Isthmus. Chile and Colombia have been on cordial terms, however, and recently a secret treaty was arranged between them by which Chile secured the right to transport her troops across the Isthmus of Panama, then Colombian territory, in the event of a war with the Argentine Republic.

Dr. Herran, the Colombian Charge d'Affaites, whose son had met the Reyes Commission at the railroad station, joined the Commissioners at the Arlington soon after their arrival and had a long conference with them. Gen. Reyes declined to talk for publication about the object of his visit other than to deny the statement of Mr. Bunau-Varilla, the Minister of Panama, that the Reyes Commission's purpose was to lobby against the ratification of the Panama Canal treaty.

Dr. Herran and Gen. Reyes continued their conference for several hours, and at the close Dr. Herran announced that they had talked over personal matters only.

"Can you say what Gen. Reyes's mission is; what he comes for?" Dr. Herran was asked.

"No, I cannot; I do not know; he has not told me," he replied.

"How about Mr. Bunau-Varilla's statement that Gen. Reyes has come to lobby in the Senate against the ratification of the Canal treaty?"

"I cannot say. I have no information as to what he is going to do."

Dr. Herran said that Gen. Reyes desired to deny the newspaper interviews with him sent out from New Orleans. Gen. Reyes had written his denial in Spanish and Dr. Hierran translated it as follows:

"Since my arrival at New Orleans I have repeatedly informed the representatives of the present and I must now add that statements attributed to me in several recent publications are entirely incorrect."

Information has been received here of a semi-official nature that the Venezuelan Government does not intend to answer the appeal of President Marroquin of Colombia for the moral support of Venezuela and other Latin-American countries in his protest against the course of the United States on the Isthmus other than sending bare acknowledgment of the receipt of President Marroquin's communication. Venezuela's attitude is that the Panama affair is one strictly between Colombia and the United States.

> LONDON WOMEN MUSTN'T BLUSH. Course at the Jopling School of Art to Cure Shyness.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, Nov. 28 .- Shyness is not generally regarded as a prominent characteristic of the modern woman, but the distress ing malady is, apparently, sufficiently prevalent for it is to be seriously taken in hand at the Jopling School of Art at Earl's Court. There, during the coming season, bashful women are invited to come and be cured by Miss Elsa Desterre. One meeting has already been held, and the roseate blushes which suffused the cheeks of bashful blondes and brunettes rivalled nature's finest efforts in the shape of a tropical sunset. Never, it is said, has a murky afternoon of London in the autumn been relieved by such a warm, glowing piece of color.

The lecturer at this meeting did not spare her quailing hearers as she told them that shyness was merely a form of conceit, the result of believing themselves greater than hey really are. The cure is to be effected by means of a series of debates, in the course of which the disease will be considered in all its aspects. The shyest women will take the chair in turn. Papers will be mad by the shyest and will be replied to by the next in order of shyness. After a course of this treatment under Miss Desterre's unblushing guardianship it is confidently expected that a blush will never again be seen in a London drawing room save on a masculine cheek.

KAISER'S THROAT SLOW TO HEAL. Disquieting Reports in Berlin as to His Condition.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, Nov. 28 .-- Very disquieting are all the reports in regard to the health of Emperor William. The wound produced by the operation on his throat is, in semiofficial language, slower to heal than was hoped for, and its place, upon the vocal cord renders it liable to constant irritation.

In Berlin this week certain definite alarming reports have been discussed. It should be borne in mind, however, that such reports are practically inevitable considering the present circumstances and the history of the royal family. Nor is i surprising that the reassuring statements in regard to the non-malignant character of the Emperor's ailment do not receive the frank credence to which their officia character seems to entitle them. Another fact which does not receive due consideration is that Emperor William is seriously overworked man and is sufferng now from the cumulative effects of too heavy overdrafts upon his general powers of endurance. This feature of his condition alone sufficiently explains the long rest upon which his medical advisers strongly insist.

Talk of a Compromise That Would Insure the Neutrality of the United States -Japan, Not Inclined to Belleve These Reports, Looks on Stiuation as Serious.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUS LONDON, Nov. 28 .- Contradictory reports come from St. Petersburg and Tokio regarding the crisis in the Far East. The Russian authorities give the most pacific version of the situation, while all despatches from Japanese sources represent the crisis as grave. The Japanese Legation in London regards the condition as bad as it could possibly be, short of war itself. Japan at the present moment recalls the advice of the Chinese proverb, "Strike when you hear pacific words and see warlike acts." The belief grows stronger in Japan that Russia is merely seeking a little more time for preparations before sending a peremptory refusal to the demands made upon her. On the other hand, some people, even those in diplomatic circles, are beginning to think that there is some genuineness in the reports that Russia is really repenting of her Manchurian ventures, which she finds have been wholly unprofitable. It is certain that a section of the Russian press is assiduously building a bridge over which Russia can, if the need should arise, gracefully retreat from her present position.

A compromise which is openly suggested is that Russia should annex that part of Manchuria between the railway and the Amur River and give up every ambition connected with the southern branch of the line. She could retain some sort of hold upon the line itself by an international guar-

This proposition is particularly designed as a concession to American demands, and it is argued that it would insure the benevolent neutrality of the United States in any future developments. In the present critical state of international relationships Russia would do much to attain this end. In the meantime the internal situation in Russia is becoming alarmingly worse. Many large districts in various parts of the empire are in a state of smoldering revolution. Many large towns, including Baku in the east, and Vitebsk in the west, are under martial law. Revolutionary proclamations have been distributed among the soldiers in nearly all garrison towns asking them to bind themselves on oath to refuse to fire on the people in case of disturbances. The authorities ordered the soldiers to surrender these papers on pain of heavy penalties, yet only one-third of them could be obtained.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF MURDER. Her Four Year Old Foster Child Found

Dying at Foot of Stairs.

The death of four year old Mary Conning of 10 McWhorter street, Newark, on Friday night is put down as murder by the Newark police, and her aunt and foster mother, Mrs. Catherine Ray, is in jail awaiting examination next Friday. Joseph Ray, the driver of a distributing wagon in that city for a newspaper, is the husband of the young woman under arrest. He is 28 years old and has the reputation of being steady. She is just over 21, and is addicted to drink. She is the daughter of Maurice Flynn, a contractor.

The Rays have two children, but in February last adopted little Mary Conning, who was a daughter of Ray's sister. The neighbors say that the child had a hard time when left alone with its foster mother and while Ray was at work on his wagon. Several times recently Ray appeared in the Third precinct police court as a complainant against his wife for drunkenness and she became known as one of the tough characters of the precinct. She was spree ing on Friday with another woman and locked the Conning child in her bedroom, taking her own children to the home of a relative. Ray returned and found the house locked up and broke in through the back door to find the foster child locked in the bedroom and crying.

He left, but returned later and found his wife in a bad mood and the child missing. Ray made a protest against her brutality to the child and she drove him from the house with a three tined kitchen fork, with which she fiercely lunged at him. He went to the nearest telephone and c lled up Po-lice Sergeant Loftus, who sent three police-men to the house. They sent back a call men to the house. They sent back a call for detectives and an ambulance. They had found the Conning child at the bottom of a flight of stairs in the basement in a dying condition and the woman in such a violent condition that they had trouble in controlling her. The child died in the ambulance on the way to St. James's Hospital, and County Physician McKenzie waid that death was caused by abuse. Nothing Left of the Summit Proofing Company's Plant-Workmen's Wages Lost. Fire started in the factory of the Summit Proofing Company, manufacturers of waterproof cloth, at Eighth and Madison streets. Hoboken, at 1:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and two minutes later flames and dense smoke issued from every window in the building. Twenty employees had to run for their lives. David Carroll of 449 West Fifty-fifth street, Manhattan, and Herbert Tempest of 204 Central avenue, Jersey City, were badly scorched about the face and hands. The factory was well stocked with manufactured goods and raw material of very inflammable character. At 4 o'clock nothing remained of the plant but the walls and a tangled mass of machinery. A member of the company said the loss would be fully $100,000.

The employees were paid off before the fire. Several of them placed their week's wages in their clothes in the coat and hat room and the money was burned
